

Stanford Arts, Humanities and Medicine Program presents a reading by

Rafael Campo

Cultural Competence:
Poetry and the Importance of Voice in the Illness Experience

Thursday March 1, 2012

6:30p

Cantor Arts Center

Auditorium

Stanford University

Free and open to the public

Seating is limited; no reservations

Dr. Campo is Associate Professor of Medicine, Harvard Medical School, and Director, Office of Multicultural Affairs and the Humanism in Medicine Program. The author of seven books of essays and poetry, his awards include the Agni Poetry Prize, the National Poetry Series Open Competition Award, two Lambda Literary Awards (Poetry and Biography/Autobiography), and finalist, National Book Critic Circle Award. His clinical work includes AIDS medicine. He holds a joint Stanford Humanities Center/SiCa fellowship for arts writers/practitioners, sponsored by the Arts, Humanities and Medicine Program, Stanford Center for Biomedical Ethics.

<http://arts.stanford.edu/visitingartists/rafael-campo>

<http://bioethics.stanford.edu/arts/>

